chapter 4 – where

4.1 location

Austria

Austria is located in the center of Europe and was first mentioned in the year 996AD and encompasses both the Eastern Alps, which cover almost two-thirds of its territory, and the Danube region. The surface area is 83,858 km² (32,378 square miles). Because of its location, the country has always been a crossroad between the great economic and cultural regions of Europe. It is bordered by the Czech Republic and Germany to the north, Hungary and Slovakia to the east, Slovenia and Italy to the south, and Switzerland and Liechtenstein to the west.

Climate

This European heartland is home to a wide variety of landscapes, climates and flora. Austria's landscapes include major and minor mountain ranges, hills and plains. The foothills of the Alps and Carpathian Mountains, the Vienna Basin and parts of Austria's share of the Pannonian plains in the east are the most important areas of settlement and economic activity. The country's highest mountain is the Grossglockner (3,797m or 12,457 feet), and the most important river is the Danube, which flows across Austria for some 350 km (210 miles).

Austria lies in a temperate climatic zone with the influence of a moderate Atlantic climate felt more strongly in the west and northwest while the east reflects a more continental climate. Precipitation levels drop significantly from west to east and rise with altitude. The diversity of topographical and climatic conditions results in a wide variety of flora and fauna. Austria is one of Europe's most heavily wooded countries (47% of total area).

Most hotels, restaurants and businesses accept credit cards (American Express, Visa, Eurocard/MasterCard and Diners Club). All common currencies can be exchanged at banks, post offices, at airports, in bigger hotels, tourist offices and other currency exchange locales.

A network of ATM machines, most of which allow cash advances on credit cards, can be found across the entire country. Currency exchange machines are available in some cities. There is no restriction on cash amounts being imported to or exported from Austria.

Electricity

Austria uses 220 Volts, AC at 50 cycles/seconds. The plugs in use are two-pin round. Some appliances will not function well, even if equipped with an adapter.

Carinthia

Carinthia is the most southerly province of Austria and was founded in the year 976.

The first inhabitants of the country were Celts in the first century AD the Romans conquered the country. In 1335, Carinthia became part of the Habsburgs empire and joined to the Duchy of Austrian Circle in the year 1512.

Carinthia borders Slovenia and Italy, the climate is almost Mediterranean. The country is a popular tourist destination because of its mountains and its numerous warm lakes.

The capital, Klagenfurt is on the east bank of Lake Wörthersee. Klagenfurt was already established by the 12th century. The town's landmark is a dragon, a kind of dragon that once threatened and killed peasants.
